

July, already?! Announcing the newest addition to our family!

Hey guys! Wow, I can't believe it's been over a month since my last post. Time sure does fly! I've been keeping busy with work, working out, family time, and enjoying the SUMMER.

Here are a couple of non-weight loss journey new updates since I last wrote:

Hubby and I welcomed another fur-baby into our bunch!

Meet Boston.

We got him Mother's Day weekend and life just hasn't been the same since!

You guys might know, I grew up with an amazing little Miniature Schnauzer. His name was Comet. Yes, named after the Full House dog hardcore Full House fan here. He was my world. I loved him from puppy to senior citizen and beyond.

As an only child, I always considered him my brother. He was with me from the age of six to almost twenty four. I was so blessed to have my best friend with me for so many years and my husband even got to know him.

But since his passing five years ago, there's always been a hole in my heart (the size of a Schnauzer). We've had Boston for only two months but I can't even begin to explain how much he's helped to heal that heartbreak and mend that wound. Dog lovers will only understand.

Our puppy is definitely keeping me and my husband busy. Along with our other two fur baby girls, Chloe and Andie. Our family of 5 is complete for now!

Hubby and I have also been working on our home.

The end of August will mark our first year anniversary of owning our first house. We are so blessed!

Over the Fourth of July weekend, we took advantage of some great furniture sales and are very much enjoying making our house a home little by little. Shout to Sam at Star Furniture's Clearance Outlet in North Houston!!

I'm one of those people that these things take time! I don't buy something unless I'm really, really in love with it. Plus, I like to shop around! But we got very lucky last weekend and got some great pieces for the living room.

(No pictures because the furniture hasn't been delivered yet. & yes, the anticipation is killing me!!)

I wish you guys a wonderful Summer. Remember to take time for yourself and your loved ones. Life is busy and oh-so-good. Make the most of every moment!!!